SUBJECT: CONVERSATION WITH [REDACTED] AND [REDACTED] STIGLIANO

1. On July 2, 2013, Ashland Police Officer David Muri and I traveled to [REDACTED], Wellesley to make a death notification to the parents of Andrew Stigliano. We contacted the Wellesley Police Department and asked that they meet us at this address to assist with this matter. Upon our arrival, we met with Wellesley Police Department Sergeant Jeffrey Renzella and Patrol Officer Kevin Joseph. Together, we approached the residence, where we met a male who identified himself as [REDACTED] Stigliano outside on the front steps of the home. I advised him of the death of his son. Mr. Stigliano appeared to have been aware of this incident prior to our arrival. Mr. Stigliano was cooperative, and remained calm and polite during this interaction. He stated that his wife, [REDACTED] Stigliano, was en route home, and he requested we await her arrival to explain any further information was known to us. A very short time later, Ms. Stigliano arrived home. I advised Ms. Stigliano of the death of her son. She was notably angry and agitated, but remained cordial to our presence. She had specific questions about the circumstances of Andrew's death, and agreed to allow Officer Muri and I inside her residence to discuss the incident further. Based on the cordial demeanor of the Stigliano's, and to decrease further disruption to their family, I advised the Wellesley Police officers who were present that we would not require them to assist us further inside the residence.

2. Once inside the residence, I explained that I had very limited and preliminary information about the circumstances surrounding Andrew's death, however early indications of what transpired indicated that around 11:30 AM, one or more Ashland Police Officers had attempted to arrest Andrew at his residence for an outstanding warrant. During that arrest a violent confrontation had occurred, and during that confrontation, Andrew had been fatally shot by an Ashland Police Officer. I explained that I was reluctant to provide further detailed information at that time, because the exact circumstances of the encounter were not all known to me, and remained under investigation. I assured the Stigliano family that a thorough and comprehensive investigation of the incident was underway, which would be conducted by the State Police and Middlesex District Attorney's Office with the assistance of the Ashland Police Department. The Stigliano's pressed me to provide additional details of the altercation which lead to the shooting, and in particular whether Andrew was armed with a gun at the time of the altercation. I explained that based on the very preliminary information I had, it appeared he had been armed with a shotgun, but that this remained an important part of the investigation that still needed to be confirmed through police and witness interviews, as well as a review of forensic evidence at the scene. I reiterated that I was reluctant to provide any additional detailed information at this early stage of the investigation, in part out of concern I might provide information that later turned out to be inaccurate.

3. I then attempted to obtain further information from the Stigliano's about Andrew's background. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stigliano were extremely guarded in their responses to my inquiries, and provided very limited information. However in response to my inquiries, they in summary stated the following:

[REDACTED]

He was currently being treated by Dr. [REDACTED] in Framingham, and his treatment included the use of the medication Seboxin.

[REDACTED]

Andrew had been arrested under various circumstances since moving to Ashland, and he had a history of having an adversarial relationship with the Ashland Police Department. All of the cases brought forward by the Ashland Police had been dismissed or otherwise thrown out at court, and Andrew expressed he was frequently unfairly targeted by the Ashland Police Department. It was clear during our conversation that the Stigliano's shared this sentiment. During one incident, Mr. Stigliano indicated that Andrew's home had been raided by the Ashland Police, and a shotgun had been recovered. Mr. Stigliano described the firearm as an antique collectable shotgun, and more of a decoration than a weapon. Mr. Stigliano reported that he doesn't like nor know much about guns, so he had no further information about the circumstances of how Andrew came to possess this or any other firearm. Both Stigliano's denied any knowledge about whether Andrew currently owned or possessed a gun. Mr. Stigliano indicated that Andrew had stated he had an arrest warrant related to an incident with [REDACTED], and that the police were looking for him because of this warrant. This conversation had occurred within the last few days, possibly on Saturday, June 29, 2013. Neither of the Stigliano's indicated they had communicated with Andrew since that time.

4. I informed the Stigliano's that Andrew would be transported to the Office of Chief Medical Examiner for a post mortem medical and forensic examination, and asked them to contact a funeral home to arrange his remains be returned to their family. I further advised them that for the next several hours or more, Andrew's home would remain inaccessible as it was being processed by crime scene personnel. They requested I notify them when this process was complete, which I later did. They asked about who would be permitted to obtain documents related to this incident. I informed them that they, as Andrew's next of kin, likely would be able to obtain documents through a formal request of the Middlesex District Attorney's Office, upon completion of the investigation. I cautioned them that the investigative process was lengthy, and they should expect several weeks or more to pass before the investigation would be completed. They expressed interest in their privacy being respected, and the contents of our conversation remaining private. I told them I would be writing a report to document our conversation, and that in my experience, these reports are not widely disseminated to the public. However, I explained that ultimately public record laws guide who, if anyone, would be eligible to review my reports. I provided my business card to Ms. Stigliano, and advised her to contact me if she had further questions.

Respectfully Submitted,

Kevin M. Baker
